FLEXIBLE SCHEDULE

Move the days around to suit your week. Keep four sessions, avoid stacking both lower-body days back-to-back, and stop each workout when the 20-minute timer reaches zero.

PROGRESSIVE OVERLOAD

Get a little stronger over time

Progressive overload means gradually asking your muscles to do slightly more. In this program, the simplest method is to build clean reps first, then use the next sensible dumbbell weight.

1

START COMFORTABLE

Choose a load that lets you reach the bottom of the rep range with control. The final 2-3 reps should feel challenging.

2

OWN THE TOP OF THE RANGE

Stay at the same weight until every set reaches the top of the rep range cleanly.

3

INCREASE SLIGHTLY

Move to the next sensible dumbbell weight or the smallest available increase.

4

BUILD BACK UP

After increasing, reps may drop. Keep the new weight and build back toward the top of the range.

SIMPLE DECISION RULE

Can't reach the minimum reps cleanly

Keep the same weight or reduce slightly.

Top reps are hard but clean

Perfect. Stay at this weight

Top reps feel comfortable

Increase slightly next time.

LOG YOUR WEIGHTS

If you do not record the weight used, it is easy to repeat the same workout without actually progressing.

HOME DUMBBELL GUIDELINES

Keep it simple and consistent

1

WARM-UP

3 minutes before each session.

2

ROUNDS & REPS

Follow the workout page and the week you are on.

3

REST

45-60 seconds between rounds.

4

CHOOSE THE RIGHT WEIGHT

The last 2 reps should feel challenging, but your form stays good.

5

GOOD FORM

Move with control. Use a range of movement you can own.

6

LISTEN TO YOUR BODY

Muscle effort is expected. Sharp pain is not.

7

20-MINUTE CAP

When the timer reaches 20 minutes, stop - even if one set remains.

8

MISSED SESSION

Do not double up hard sessions to catch up. Continue with the next available workout.

CHALLENGING, NOT CHAOTIC. CONTROLLED REPS. STEADY PROGRESS.

8-WEEK PROGRESSION

How sets and reps work

WEEKS	SETS	REPS	FOCUS
Weeks 1-2	2 sets	Use the reps shown on each exercise page	Learn the movements and keep control
Weeks 3-4	2-3 sets	Stay within the listed rep range	Build consistency and confidence
Weeks 5-6	3 sets	Stay within the listed rep range	Increase weight where ready
Weeks 7-8	3 sets	Stay within the listed rep range	Finish stronger than you started

IMPORTANT

The rep number printed next to each exercise is the target per set. Example: '8-12' means every set should be 8 to 12 reps. Full Dead Bug is 6-10 reps per side, per set. Glute Bridge is 10-15 reps per set.

SIMPLE EXAMPLE

- If you are in Weeks 1-2 and Goblet Squat says 8-12 reps: do 2 sets of 8-12 reps.
- If you are in Weeks 3-4 and Reverse Lunge says 8-10 / leg: do 2-3 sets of 8-10 reps per leg.
- If you are in Weeks 5-8 and Floor Press says 8-12 reps: do 3 sets of 8-12 reps.

WHEN TO INCREASE WEIGHT

- When you can reach the top of the rep range on all sets with good form, increase slightly next time.
- If you cannot reach the minimum reps with good form, keep the same weight or go lighter.
- The 20-minute cap still applies. Quality matters more than cramming in every set.
